To the Editor of the Alexandria Gazette:

A friend of mine cut a piece cut of the Baltimore Sun styled "Mohamed Ali'. Adventures with the Bunco Men," which I read with much interest, as it forcibly reminded me of a somewhat similar expertence of mine, since my sojourn in your good old tows. Upon one occasion I was induced by a couple of friends to participate in a game, which they called Aunt Polly Mo Garrity. It consisted in our placing each a nickle on the table concealed by our hards, and upon uncovering the coins, if two of and upon uncovering the coins, if two of them should prove heads and one a tail, or two tails and one a head, the owner of the odd one would take all three. I lost several nickles, without suspicion when, upon and denly raising my eyes I discovered one of my friends pointing his finger to his head, when it flashed upon me that I had been sold. I immediately declined a farther participation in the game, notwithstanding their earnest assurances that I was the fairest their earnest assurances that it was the fairest game in the world. I was next taught the game of Penocle, or, as the French term it, Besique, and had come to the conclusion that I was a pretty good player. This illusion was, however, suddenly dispelled. A short time since I was engaged in a game with short time since I was engaged in a game with one of the same friends who had so kindly taught me Aunt Polly. We were playing for beer and I had made 490 points of the requisite 500, while my opponent's score was only 230. He dealt the cards, and turned up the queen of spades. Upon casting his eyes over the cards in his hand, he said "These are pretty good stones and I would not mind going you two beers that I win the game"; as I had the king and queen of hearts in my hand that would count 20 upon my taking a trick, and thereby win the game, I in my hand that would count 20 upon my taking a trick, and thereby win the game, I acceeded to the proposition. I led a small card which he took with a ten, and saying "I melt my dees," laid down the seven of spades and took up the queen, thus adding 10 to his score. He then led a nine of clubs to which I played the eight, upon which he called 40 trumps. He then led a nine of trumps which I was unable to take and called 150 trumps. He led the ten of trumps and called Penocle, meaning that he had drawn the jack of trumps to his queen of spades, thus adding 40 more to his score; he then led his ace of trumps and called game without my acce of trumps and called game without my being able to take a single trick. The next game we played on until my score had reached 499 or one point of being out. My friend dealt the cards and turned up the seven of spades or dees, which added 10 to his score of 150; upon looking at his hand be his score of 150; upon looking at his hand be remarked, "These are pretty fairs lones and I wouldn't mind betting two beers I win the game." Having only one point to go and twenty in my hand I at once agreed to it. He took the card, I led with a ten, drew a card and, as before, he called 40 trumps. He drew another card and called 150 trumps. Again he drew a card, led another trump and called 100 bugs, meaning he had all four gardens and the score of the square between Cameron and Queen streets, and running thence north on Eoyal street fifty-nine feet one inch; thence east parallel to Queen streets, and running thence north on Eoyal street fifty-nine feet one inch; thence east parallel to Royal street fifty-nine fe and called 100 bugs, meaning he had all for aces. Again he drew and called Penocle adding 40 more to his score. He then led the see of trumps and called game. Concluding it was not a good day for Penocle I decamped. VICTIM.

THE SNAKE GAVE HIM A CHANCE. - While Mike James, a boy 14 years of age, was going through the woods near Clarksville with his father one day last week he said: "Fath" er, if a snake was to bite me you just ought to see how quickly I would bandage my leg with this rubber strap." The boy spoke positively, and no sooner were the words out of his mouth than he exclaimed: "I am saw his south than he exclaimed: "I am snake bitten." His father, turning round, saw his son drawing the bandage tightly around his leg just above the bite. The old man killed the snake and found it to be an adder of the most deadly kind. The administration of internal remedies at once com menced: First, one plug, then an old-time twist of home made, went down like food; then one pint of corn whisky. All this made him very sick, and he vomited freely. He is yet unable to walk but is rapidly recover-

"Darling," he said, "should the fate decree To separate my love and me, Where shall I go, what shall I do, When I'm no longer here with you?"

"O! love," she said, "could cruel fate Make Heaven a place so desolate As my poor heart would surely be If you were taken away from me.

But if you go do be content And take Stonebraker's Liniment To rub away each ache and pain, Till you come back to your Lizs Jane." Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle.
